Feature Column by Eleanor Johnson
La Grangeville, NY

The Fall Equinox began when the Sun entered Libra September 22nd. The Sun in Libra always emphasizes relationships and harmony. Venus, the ruler of Libra, is in the sign of Virgo in October. If you find yourself especially analytical, fussy about details, you were experiencing Venus in Virgo. In this sign Venus is not too happy! We may have to stretch ourselves spiritually to relate to others in a more loving manner.

Mars, the planet that motivates our energies will be in the sign of Sagittarius. Mars is also the co-ruler of Scorpio. It can give us a desire to feel free of many blockages that have encumbered our evolvment. This is a freedom loving sign and can act as a catalyst for change as it loves freedom to express in its own unique way. Mars in Sagittarius loves to debate issues of social justice or injustice. It is the social glue that holds our ideas together.

The planet Mercury will retrograde November 7th. It will go direct November 26th. The usual precautions will prevail. Be sure you communicate as clearly as possible. Avoid buying electrical appliances, etc. Mercury retrograde is a good time to do research.

November 13th a solar eclipse occurs at 21 degrees of Scorpio. This will emphasize the ability to bring our awareness to any hidden aspects of ourselves that we would like to change. These aspects can be brought to light by the Lunar Eclipse on November 28th and highlight the circumstances we would like to change.

Another major configuration is Saturn changing its placement on October 6th until December 25, 2014 in the sign of Scorpio. Saturn in Scorpio creates a sextile to Pluto in Capricorn, a glorious opportunity for renewed consciousness to manifest. These two planets are in mutual reception, meaning they are in each other's sign. They can help us realize a greater understanding of our potential.

Love and Light

Remembering A Dear Friend

Thank you, George, for being an inspiration to Light Workers everywhere. Although we mourn your transition, we celebrate your life here on earth. We will miss you; yet the memory of your beautiful gentle spirit will always live on in our hearts.

We know that you have now reunited with many loved ones and friends. No doubt June/Julian and Bill Burke, Miriam & Neil Chandler, Joy Srour, Judy La Kamp & George Ruby threw one heck of a welcome home party for you.

We were all blessed to have known George and to have had him in our lives. Whether he was known as George (Joseph), Daddy, or Grandpa, he touched every single one he came in contact with. We will never forget how special he was. We should not be sad about the day he past because George's energy and light still shine today in everyone of us who knew him. He is now at peace and in harmony with the world; and he is smiling down on all of us.

George's life was not without pain, suffering, adversity or sadness. He did, however, have the strength and will to overcome. George channeled his thoughts and energy into goodness. He made the best out of every situation, whether good or bad. He always maintained a positive nature, a smile, and had a kind word for all.

George had many exemplary attributes which made him the unique individual that we all knew and loved. He was a person who gave unconditional love with no expectations of anything in return. He had a fantastic sense of humor; and we traded jokes around the potluck lunches after Development classes. He was caring and always giving of his time, his energy, and his knowledge. He was supportive, always there when anyone needed help or advice.

George became the editor of the Light Centers for World Peace monthly healing newsletter, upon Bill Burke's transition. I assisted George in many areas of the newsletter, and eventually it became the Healing email list sent out daily.

Friends come and go in our lives; some stay and some don't. I consider George to be my forever friend.

George Lederman RIP

My first recollection of George stems from the early

Julian classes. I don't recall George being at the classes in New York City but later at the home of June and Bill in La Grangeville George and Adele were present at these classes. Some of the members knew each other from living in the same area, others of us had to get to know everyone through the classes. The very first Gathering brought the group together for a weekend and we had time to interact and get to know each other a bit better.

George was a gentle, quiet person who pretty much ignored his disability whenever he could. He loved to do crossword puzzles and that was something we had in common. Through the years George and I had some interesting conversations but my fondest memory of him took place at another Gathering. I believe it was at Lake George. We had finished dinner and several of us were sitting around waiting for the evening session to begin. Both George and Casimir Bernard were using canes that day and the two of them began dueling with their canes. Their actions and remarks were totally hysterical and those of us witnessing this spectacle were laughing like a bunch of silly school kids.

I have often thought of that day when two men put aside their challenges and had a really good, funny time! I know that both of them have shed their physical difficulties but I can't help but wonder if they ever pretend their cane dueling exploits for the amusement of their comrades in heaven?

It was a pleasure and an honor to have known you, George.

God Speed!

Celebrating the life of Joseph "George" Lederman

On May 27, 2012, Joseph "George" Lederman made his transition from our world surrounded by his wife of nearly 56 years, children and son-in-law and rejoined family and friends that were waiting to great him.

George was born in Brooklyn to two Polish immigrants and had two siblings. Although he went on later in life to become a teacher he, ironically, was not a good student. He dropped out of high school and joined the Air Force in 1950. Over the course of the next four years, George was stationed in Europe as an "Aircraft Control & Warning Operator". In 1954 he completed his service and came back to New York to work with the data machines (before computers) for a large insurance company. During this time, he went to night school and completed his GED.

During that time, his younger sister, Francine, was stricken with cancer. While visiting his sister in the hospital, a patient in the next bed over played matchmaker (it was a Jewish hospital, you see). She urged George to ask out the pretty nurse, Adele, that was caring for his sister. He scribbled a note to her on the flap of an envelope. It worked. She did go out with him. Our dad, ever the romantic, proposed to Adele on their first date. Adele finally said yes – two years later. They got married in 1956 and were the love of each others lives for nearly 56 years. Their daughter, Lisa, was born in 1961. Their son, Marc, was born in 1969.

In 1964 George was stricken with Guillian Barre' a fast-acting paralyzing disease that starts at the extremities, and can rapidly paralyze the lungs and can be fatal.

If, by now, you are confused if his name is George or Joseph, you are right. Although his official name is Joseph, his mother re-named him George to ward off the angel of death after he was sick as an infant. His mom's strategy worked as an infant – and years later worked for him on that day. George was rushed to the hospital. After two months in that hospital, and two years at the VA hospital, fought, beat the odds and came out walking. Walking with braces and crutches, but he came out walking.

Our dad had often told us that this experience changed his life. In his words, he was a "screw up" until this experience. He often made the ironic statement that this illness was the best thing that ever happened to him. Dad had to retrain to walk and embark on a new career path.

Our dad chose teaching culminating with a Masters Degree in Education with a 6 year specialty in Reading . He taught at Austin Road Elementary School, Mahopac, NY for 23 years. He lived in Brooklyn then Carmel ( Putnam County ), NY until 2006 when he moved out to California –the warmer winter weather was definitely appealing. Together with our mom, dad lived in Rossmoor – a senior community. An avid chess player dad participated in the Chess Club. He also enjoyed the ceramic and book clubs as well as painting workshops within Rossmoor.

Our dad had been a member of the Julian Community for over 40 years. Together with Adele, he learned, studied and grew spiritually. He participated in classes, meditation groups and Gatherings. Our dad was also an editor for the LIGHT CENTERS for WORLD PEACE for many years and loved the circle of friends that he developed within this community. One of his favorite things that he loved to share was something that Bill Burke used to say as someone left to go home – "Safe Home". "Safe Home" dad said every time someone said goodbye.

My brother Marc and I have learned many lessons from our dad. The biggest thing that we have learned is that a handicap – no matter how severe, does not have to control or overpower you.

It can limit you only in what you allow it to limit you . This is a huge lesson to learn. We all have things that will affect our lives in a negative way. Illnesses, personal setbacks, professional ones, as they say, S....tuff happens.

How you perceive it and what you take away from that situation is merely a matter of your character.

Obstacles are simply lessons to be learned and to overcome. How often do you hear people say that something is someone else's fault. Or in our dad's world, as a teacher, it was always – I earned an A but the teacher gave me an F. Our propensity to blame others for our misfortune is clearly an easy escape from facing what is a failure on our part to achieve the goal.

In these situations, we are doomed to have the scenario repeat and repeat until we bear the burden, fess up, and deal with our own lack of character.

One example of obstacles towards a goal was surrounding my Bat Mitzvah. I found out a few years after, yes, a few years after that my dad had been in an automobile accident the day before the service. I never knew that because he was there – in a wheelchair. They told me his back was sore. He had checked himself out of the hospital AMA (against medical advice) to attend my Bat Mitzvah. It all makes perfect sense now. When you look back at the pictures, my dad looks amazingly, how shall I say it politely - "giddy-faced" from all of the pain meds he was on. He was going to be there no matter what and he was.

One winter day back east, it was too icy to get up our hill with a car. This was wayyy before cell phones and it was a small community. Houses were quite far apart. Rather than go back somewhere overnight and wait it out, he got out of the car and crawled up the hill on his hands and knees in the ice until he got to the top of the 1/2 mile long hill and home. I'm not sure if that was the wisest decision but it showed his determination not to let his handicap or the storm get in the way of his ability to get home.

He sat for hours with Marc, sharing Marc's passion for programming and computers. He always made science fun sharing his classroom science projects and adventures.

Our dad never missed a day of work, never called in sick, no matter what befell him. He always went in to fulfill his obligation. Failure was not an option.

That is an excellent guide for each of us as we go through our lives. Excuses are simply that – excuses. Each of us must do what we need to do to accomplish the task at hand. Whether it is to put food on your family's table, succeed at a class, project, or activity or simply to survive.

Dan, my husband, and I have always strived to teach our children the following – the world should be a better place for you having walked in it. Daddy was such an example.

What do I want my children to remember about their Grandpa. He NEVER gave up, not once, ever. When he couldn't walk – he learned how to walk again. When he couldn't write, he found ways to make it happen and modified his method. When he couldn't walk on his own, he used a walker and when he could no longer get out of bed, he continued to engage in the things he loved most – family, chess and CSI – hopefully in that order.

Our dad was a fighter – he fought his whole life to

 Levels of the Mind - Workshop #200

Accepting reality calls for knowing where you really fit with that reality. A young man might say, "I love to dance. Dancing is my life, and I want to dance," and that is beautiful. At one point in that career, he may suddenly discover that dancing for himself is not enough. He has the magnificent ability to bring dance to someone else to teach it. Suddenly a new facet of his direction opens, and he finds himself in that capacity and has a great fulfillment. So, you see, there is always more than one thing in acceptance. You accept that it is real, you accept that it is for you, and you accept how it will unfold for you in one facet of that particular career. It is very important, but step one is accepting the reality of it. As long as you are saying something can not possibly happen, it can not.

In all phases of life, there is what you call the channeling of energies and the direction. All that you have gone through before is experience which can now be translated one way or another into a new career. Every step of your life is molding toward that which you are to be. Sometimes that molding is uncomfortable with where you are, so you change to something else. Sometimes it is simply knowing that that is only one portion of the future. And so you are led.

Never think that the years that have gone before are wasted. They are never, never wasted. They are part of the unfoldment and the growth, and they go onward with you to become molded and shaped into the new career and used. Remember (and I cannot reiterate this enough) those times of stress, negativity (as you see it), or disappointment in your life are the initiations of this time, just as surely as going through the initiations of the temple, for the initiations are always in the manner of the culture. when you have what you think of as a rough time, do not run from it. Face it, look at the reality of it, work with it, and let it direct you, because that is the initiation. That is taking you the next step to the next level.

Each of you, I am sure, have gone through times in your life when you thought it was the pits. It could not be worse. It could only go up, because there was no place to go down. By facing the reality of it, by accepting the reality of the situation as your reality, you accept the fact that it may not be the way you want it, but that is the way it is, so you better join it not fight it. In joining it,, you understand it and convert it to that which you want. As long as you are bucking your head against a wall, you are never going to get anything more than a sore head; but the moment you stop to analyze the wall and determine whether a door can be cut in it, you have won the battle. By accepting that there is a wall there, that it is your wall, and that you are going to have to do something about it, you have accepted that it is your reality. By joining and understanding it, you are able to convert it into a doorway to that which you want. When you feel down about something, go to that inner mind and let it bring you the reality of the situation which says, "I'm all right, and I can make it. It may not be the way I thought I wanted it, but it will be the way that will give me the greatest fulfillment, the greatest understanding, and the greatest opening."

Sometimes you spend so much time in your life worrying about what you cannot have that you do not see what you do have, or even the possibility that something can bring you great joy. Look at each situation in its reality. The situations in your life are not there to be mean to you, they are there to help you grow, to help you accept the reality and make it work for you. You have free will so that you can make your decisions about things. Know that that is your divine right. Recognize that in making a decision, you accept the full package of that decision.

If you decide that you are going to keep something, you keep whatever goes with it. If you decide you are going to release it, you are going to let go of whatever goes with it. Sometimes this is not easy. You want to keep pulling it back and looking at it again. When there has been a wound, you keep pulling it back and saying look how I bled, look how I hurt, and you relive it again and again and again. How can you ever get loose from it when you are wallowing in that pain. You must say, "The reality of the situation is that this was not my reality. It was not for me. I will release it and see what my reality can bring me, my real unfoldment, and my real joy."

Many people say, "Well, I tried that but I failed." They did not "fail." They tried it, it was not their reality, and they were redirected. If you label yourself failure, you are going to be failure. There is no such thing as failure. When something does not transpire, it does not transpire because it was not meant to transpire for you. It is such a relief to say, "I'm going to stop fighting the world. I'm going to take what I have and use it by my inner direction and know that that is enough, that it doesn't have to be more." That is what counts! Recognizing reality as your reality, not as something you think you 'must' do. When you make a decision, you accept the total package of that decision. When you decide to leave one profession for another, you accept that there are going to be times when you will feel uneasy because of something new, or you will wonder "is this right?" You are human. Know that you would not have had the unfoldment that says change if it were not meant to be. Accept that it is "okay," as you say in your society, and go forward with it.

I want you to affirm that what is right and perfect for you will occur and that you will have the fulfillment that you want and need. You do not say, "Let what is right and proper for me occur and this is what it is." That's where you get yourself "hung up," you see. You say, "I want what's right and proper for me and here is how I have it figured out listen to it." Instead say, "Let happen what is right and proper for me." Many times doors open and people do not recognize that they have opened, so you affirm, "Let me be totally aware that I may fully know what is right and perfect for me," and you will be guided.

Once you have decided on a change, you begin looking at the openings that are there. You prove in the physical that you want it to manifest in the physical. In other words, you do not just sit there and do nothing. You see what is going on in the world, what is available, what you might like; and you also see it with "if I like that and I want that, what do I need to have that?" Perhaps the first urge that you will get will be to go to some sort of a class, or take up some sort of a study. You will not quite know why, but you will do it. This is what I mean about having everything that goes before in your life leading to that which you are going to do. If you are led to take the study, you will take it, and you will not question what you are doing there. You will just say, "All right, I'm supposed to have it, I'll have it." In doing that, you set in motion the wheels that turn, the cogs that make it happen. Affirming that it will be so will make it so.

The energies of love, anger, strength, and joy can be felt by another when you are harboring these feelings within you. When you get up feeling marvelous and ready to take on the world, people sense that from you whether you have opened

Transitioning!

By John Svirsky
Planet, Earth

Aside from my everyday life, I devote a good portion of my life in helping souls make transition. This work on the etheric planes has taught me so much about living on this plane. I wanted to share some of my experiences, in hopes of bringing to light an area that is not always discussed or talked about.

In this work I don't always know that I am doing it (my conscious self can not control this, it is happening from a higher expression of myself), I am not always conscious of whom I am helping; but for the last 10 or so years that has been a very important part of my life. This work has been validated by many psychics, healers and guides both on this and the other side. More importantly souls who have come back from the other side, affirmed the energy work and its importance in helping them decide what their next path will be.

Many of you know that I have been a volunteer Firefighter for the past 24 years. In that capacity we not only help put out fires, but also are first to be called for car crashes. While helping to extricate their physical body out of the wreckage, I also get to work with the soul on a Meta*physical level (transcending physical matter and the laws of nature). Almost always in my experience the soul of a person involved in a car crash or other similar life threatening experience is outside hovering around or above the physical body, but not in it. I should be very clear they are still connected to the body, but not inside the physical structure. This has helped me to see and to accept the Ancients teaching: "I have a body, but I am not my body."

The rescue work I do as a Firefighter is similar to the work I do on the spiritual realm for myself. No surprise there, right? In all cases as a light worker my responsibility is not to determine what the soul is to do or where they are to go, but to help bring them back from the confusion of death. Help them release into the light of knowing and reconnecting with their own essence, their own light being, and their soul group. From that vantage point each soul can or will be helped in time to determine whether their life experience as they knew it has been completed, or whether it is time to return and work on issues not yet completed.

Spirit does not always look at the life experience the way we view it as humans. As I understand it, it means the spirit learned what it came to experience. Learning over many times is feeling the effects of actions. Since emotions are so electrically charged in the spirit realm, there's a process of releasing unexpressed, unfelt, emotional desires so that the soul can continue on its journey. Many times a soul in transition does not want to let go of the earth existence for a variety of reasons:

- Fear of the unknown.
- Fear of Judgments.
- Fear that when they look at their life they will see they did not make the best use of their time or opportunities.
- Not wanting to leave loved ones behind
- The misconception that upon release they no longer exist and dissolve into nothingness.

I perceive my responsibility in helping the dying is to hold the soul in light and allow them to experience their transition from a higher perspective. There it is gradually understood that they are so much more than just their body and their earth life. The power of unconditional love heals them and helps them in accepting their full essence not just the material expression they have taken on like a new set of clothes.

From spirit perspective Earth is a miraculous and beautiful place, one, which provides opportunity for experiential growth, as compared to, thought growth. Earth originally was created as a playground vacation spot for Spirits over eons of time. The thought forms manifested, became solidified and appeared real. In spirit terms having had an experience in a physical body can dissolve as quickly as it was created. But here on this plane the laws are different.

I worked with Julian in the later parts of June's expression and still continue to work with Julian in the present. He is teaching me and guiding me through the myriad of unknowns along the Bardo of the transition. I bring this up today because I feel I have learned more about life and how I want to live through the process of helping others cross over. If I can be of assistance with someone in your life that is making transition please call or email me. Hopefully this writing has sparked questions about the after life and with consciousness it helps us all live better lives in the present.

your mouth or not. When you get up feeling hateful to someone, resentful to someone, angry with someone, feeling bitter, that is going to emanate from you whether you are deliberately sending it or not. The response you get from others will be based on what they feel from you; so when you get up in the morning and find yourself with those feelings, immediately look for the reality of yourself (which is not hateful or bitter) and let those feelings go.

It is easy to say, "I am angry and bitter because someone else did something to me." They can do something to you, but they cannot make you angry and resentful. The only one that can make you angry and resentful is you if you accept it. Recognize that there are emotions that will flare up in you at times because of situations that have occurred, and it is natural human instinct to rear up with hurt or anger or resentment. That is all right. That is a natural thing; but the moment you recognize that, let it go, because it is unnatural if you keep it once you realize that it is there. The only one you are doing in is yourself. You need to work with it in that manner.

A Julian Blessing for us:

May all in the cosmos know your energy.

May you know wholeness and happiness and may you be light unto the world.

get to the next simcha (happy occasion). Health issues had clouded his existence for so long – his body so embattled that we were never sure he would see any of our children born. Yet he was there for each of their births and not only celebrated in but participated fully in each of our three children's b'nai mitzvot. He was able to enjoy the girl's High School and College graduations, and Joshua's graduation from the 8th grade. He shared with total joy as Joshua won awards of excellence in Baseball. He always asked Joshua to hit a big one for him, and Joshua listened. Keep it up Joshua – Grandpa will always be rooting for you.

Our dad is the exemplification of "when life gives you lemons make lemonade". He never complained about anything except when the Mets or Yankees lost.

Dad was like the energizer Bunny he kept going and going. And there were many close calls especially over the past two years. Each time he was on the brink of what was sure to be our family disaster, he would pull out of it.

Towards the end, I truly believe that he knew his time with us was approaching an end. The day before he left us, was a rough day for him. He could hardly keep his eyes open but he heard us and we reminded him that Marc was coming the next day. It was a long planned visit. Daddy was happy for the reminder and acknowledged it. We picked Marc up from the airport on Saturday morning and drove straight to the hospital. We had an amazing day with him. We shared stories, took wonderful pictures, had fun and, by the looks of it, he was going to pull through this one too.

He gave us an amazing gift on one last fabulous day. He passed peacefully with Dan, Marc, my mom and myself surrounding him and I was lucky to be holding his hand.

Daddy, thank you so much for all of the time that you shared with us. I know that I have always been your princess and I will miss you till the end of my days. I hope that when the time comes, whether you are an individual soul or a spark of the universe you'll be there to hold my hand on the other side. I want to hear all of your stories and I'll catch you up on mine. Although I'm pretty certain that you will be watching over each of us so, you'll have to do all of the talking.

Marc and I can not complete this without one undeniable truth, without the meticulous and dedicated care of our Mom, it would have been physically impossible for him to have survived as long as he did. Mom, from the bottom of our hearts for all of the family occasions that we shared as a complete family, we are forever in your debt.

We leave you with one thought to share with your families and friends. Life is what you make of it. Will you leave inspired to achieve all that life has to offer? If so, you too have learned from our dad.

We are so very proud to be the children of Joseph "George" Lederman. Daddy-you will always be in our hearts and our lives will be forever changed because of what you have taught us.

Safe home – daddy!

A new distance-learning course starts Sunday, October 21!

Have you wanted to explore the Julian teachings in greater depth, but thought your busy schedule or physical distance created a barrier?

We invite you to study the Julian materials, and connect with spiritually minded people, from the comfort of your home!

What is the course about? This course, designed around Julian's book, Self-Discovery & Manifestation, introduces you to Julian's view of the universe, and your spiritual relationship to it.

How is the course structured? We meet every two weeks. Each group session lasts about 60-75 minutes by web conferencing, and revolves around a discussion topic and teacher guided meditation and exercises. In between the classes, you read assignments, listen to meditations, and interact with fellow class members.

Who should attend? Anyone who wants a deeper understanding about the Julian teachings, or feels spiritually led to work with the Self-Development classes, is welcome to attend the class.

Who is teaches the course? Nick Theo, a student of June and Julian for more than thirty years, is a Self-Development teacher with a group in Virginia since 1993. Nick also manages the soul astrology material (<http://soulastrologer.com/>) that Julian dictated from 1976-2004. He teaches and lectures on the subjects of astrology and spirituality. Professionally, Nick has worked with online and distance learning classes in academic and training settings since 1999.

Is there a fee? There is a suggested $15 donation for each course session.
All proceeds support the Julian Teachings.

I am interested in attending the class. What should I do? Please drop us a line courses@julianteachings.com expressing your intent to join the class.
